

Square Emotions

Kelsie Avella

What :

Three individual emotions are showcased in their respective canvas.

How :

My creative process began with brainstorming what these emotions meant and what colors they radiated. I then began to create sketches and lastly brought them to life using my knowledge of adobe illustrator.

Why :

The purpose of this project is to capture what these emotions mean to me. In doing so I am able to share my view point of these emotions with people that take a look at my work.

What :

This is a picture of icicles that were forming in my backyard.

Why : This image represents new life that is constantly being formed all around us. There is death in the world but at the same time new things are being brought up from it. Icicles, which are melted and then frozen up again are a perfect example of this concept.

How :

I used the camera on my phone to take this image. There is strong lighting that showcases the icicles, signifying that they are the focal point. I also utilized photoshop to take away a couple powerlines that were distracting.
